

U.S. Interoperable Communications Seminar and Exhibit Ottawa, Canada January 15-16, 2009

YOU ARE INVITED TO ATTEND

The U.S. Commercial Service's Interoperable Communications Seminar and Exhibit in Ottawa on January 15-16, 2009.

This program will provide real-life examples of the challenges faced by the public safety sector and the solutions that leading U.S. technology suppliers offer to address the interoperable communication requirements of today. The program is expressly designed to help address the concerns and critical needs of public safety and security specialists in Canada, including emergency preparedness planners, practitioners and first-responders involved in law enforcement, fire fighting, emergency medical services, national defense and humanitarian aid.

THE SEMINAR – EXHIBIT

This program will feature a keynote address on cross-border communications programs and initiatives, presented by the U.S. Department of Home Land Security's Chief of the Federal Communications Services, Mr. James Downes. In addition, technical presentations on Communications Interoperability – The Challenges and Solutions will be presented by representatives of leading U.S. companies offering solutions for interoperable communications. In addition to having their technologies on display, these company representatives will be available for one-on-one consultations by appointment. All participants will also be invited to attend a networking reception hosted by the U.S. Ambassador to Canada, David Wilkins.
